Meredith Williams is an Associate in the Construction and Energy Practices of Smith, Gambrell & Russell, LLP.

Meredith represents clients in a broad range of general litigation matters within the construction law sector, including disputes arising from local and federal contracting.

Known for her innovative problem-solving and composed, strategic approach, Meredith builds strong client relationships rooted in trust and open communication, allowing clients to engage fully in addressing their legal and business objectives.

Drawing on her family's deep roots in the construction industry, she offers clients not only extensive industry knowledge but also a genuine commitment to advancing the interests of builders, developers, and trades professionals. Meredith is particularly focused on the evolving landscape of construction law and is well-positioned to counsel clients on matters and transactions related to renewable energy projects and emerging technologies.
